

As it happened, just as the Captain was taking his first bite, Angeliki was walking past. She could not help asking.

“How’s the tiropita, sir?”

“Oh delicious, thank you. It brings back memories,” said the captain.

And then he looked up at her again.

She seemed strangely familiar.

“You know, I just arrived here, but I feel like this is a home from home,” he said.

“Aw that’s a lovely compliment,” smiled Angeliki, obviously pleased.

“Have you ever had that experience, that you’ve been somewhere before, even when you know that you haven’t? I think they call it déjà vu.”

“I haven’t personally,” replied Angeliki thoughtfully, “but it’s not unusual for the guests here to have slightly uncanny experiences. Some say the hotel is haunted.”